

06/10/2026:

GEM GOLEM THRONE

Sleep paralysis
opened into lucidity.

Alone in the forest,
I tested immortality.

My body became a toy I could take apart.

The pieces
snapped back together.

Then I chose
a wilder shape.

I became
a Were-Rat.

The forest
became a race.

A familiar shadow
crossed the moon.

Talons closed
around me.

So I abandoned
shape.

Slime slipped where claws could not.

I seeped
into the earth.

The tunnels
returned me
to myself.

Below the roots,
jewels filled the dark.

I decided
the jewels
should live.

Lucid Light
woke the mine.

The golems
rose from gems and stone.

But they did
not trust
flesh.

To them, I was not rock
enough.

The golems
put me back
together.

They understood
the language of constructs.

So the mine
gave me a throne.

I ruled in pieces no
longer.