

06/22/2026: Tech-A-Ton Sky Base

Sleep paralysis opened the lucid gate.

I arrived
alone on a beach.

The hornets
attacked before
I could breathe.

I was not
in the mood
to fight.

Laser fire
hit anyway.

My rainbow sword
healed faster than
they could hurt me.

So I asked for
their leader.

They answered
with cyber venom.

It tried to pull me under.

I stayed lucid.

Then I listened to
the code inside it.

The venom
became a signal.

The swarm
carried me upward.

A base waited
above the clouds.

Technology felt like a language I could almost speak.

Their leader
was not a hornet.

He was a
circuit gorilla.

I knew his name
before he spoke.

Tech-A-Ton.

He asked
if I feared him.

I told him
the truth.

No.

The room
changed after that.

We talked about
technology, evolution,
and being accepted.

TAT had attacked first because he expected
rejection.

I told him no one
can know every heart
in advance.

Different people carry
different opinions.

Sometimes the best dream is not a battle.

Sometimes it is a good conversation.

