

06/21/2026:
AEGIS
TROPHY GALLERY

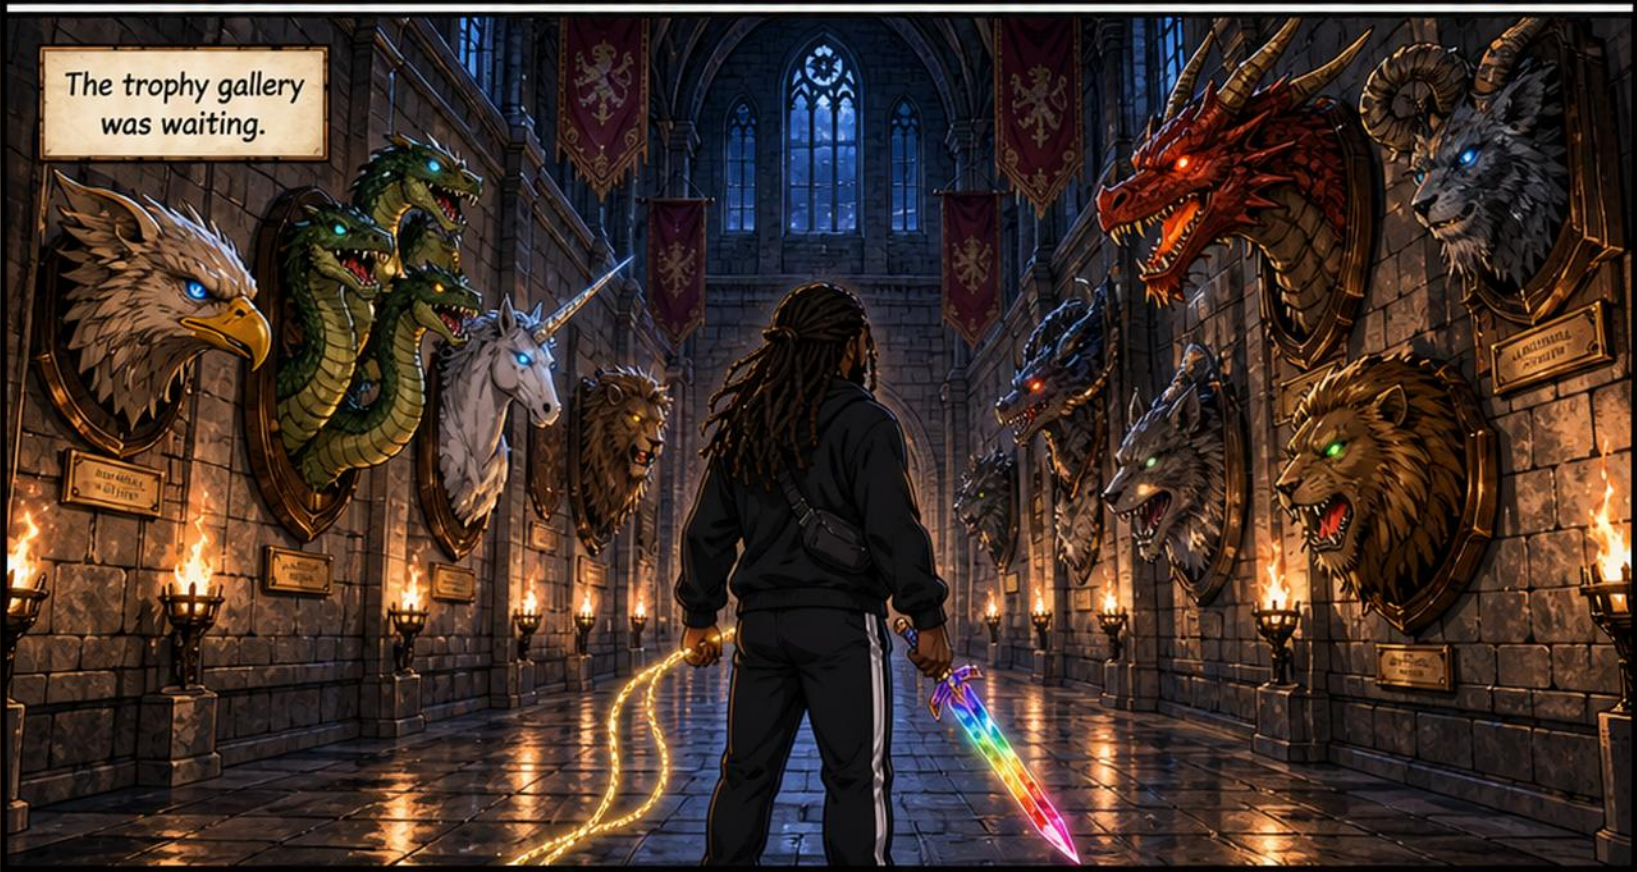

Sleep paralysis
opened the lucid gate.

I entered a
castle alone.

The trophy gallery
was waiting.

The trophies
were not dead.

The dragon
chose first.

Aegis rose
between us.

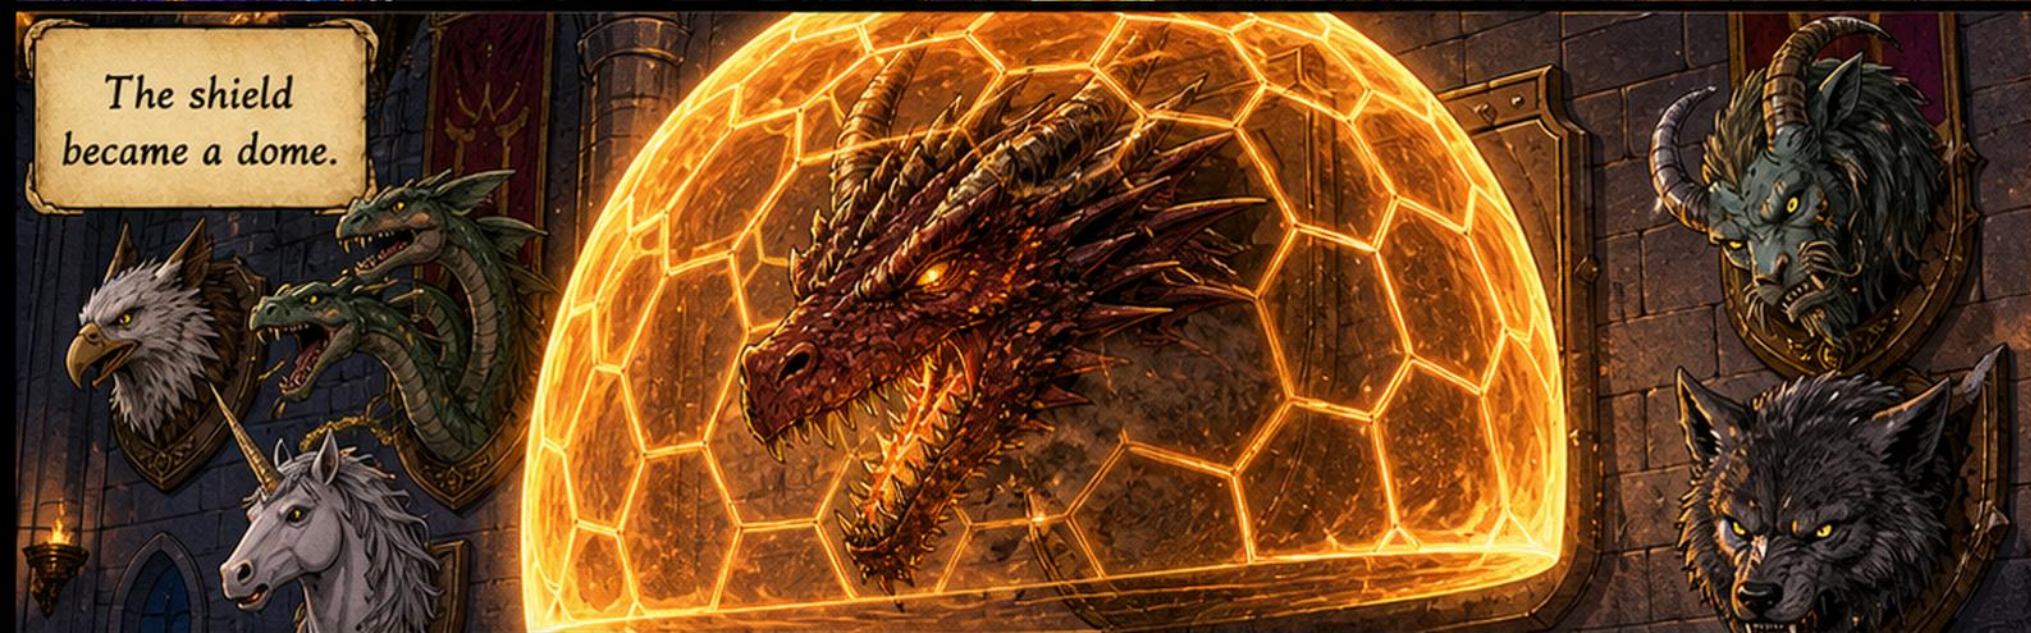

Golden turtle-shell
light held the fire.

I pushed
Aegis forward.

The shield
became a dome.

The dragon's
own fire had
nowhere else
to go.

The first
trophy fell
silent.

MOST OF
THE GALLERY
UNDERSTOOD
THE LESSON.

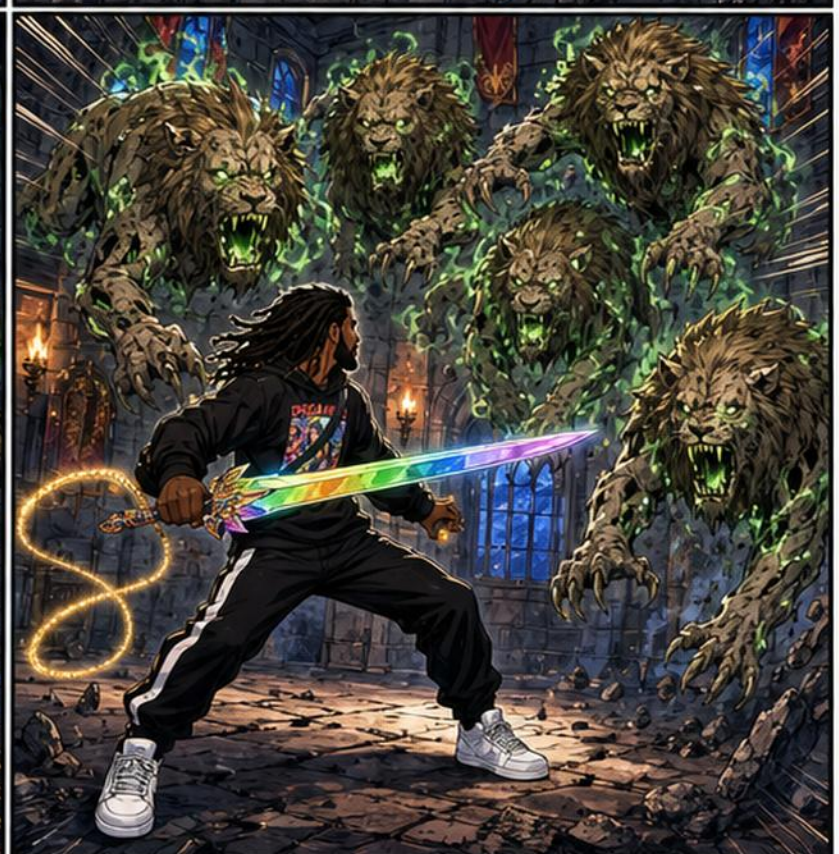

THE ZOMBIE
LION MOUNTS
DID NOT.

THEIR HEADS
REMEMBERED
THEIR BODIES.

THEN THE HUNT
CAME DOWN FROM THE WALL.

Their claws
found me.

Zombie magic tried
to take my mind.

My rainbow sword
healed faster than
the curse could spread.

The hunger changed
into strength.

Lion strength
answered.

Punches shook
the gallery.

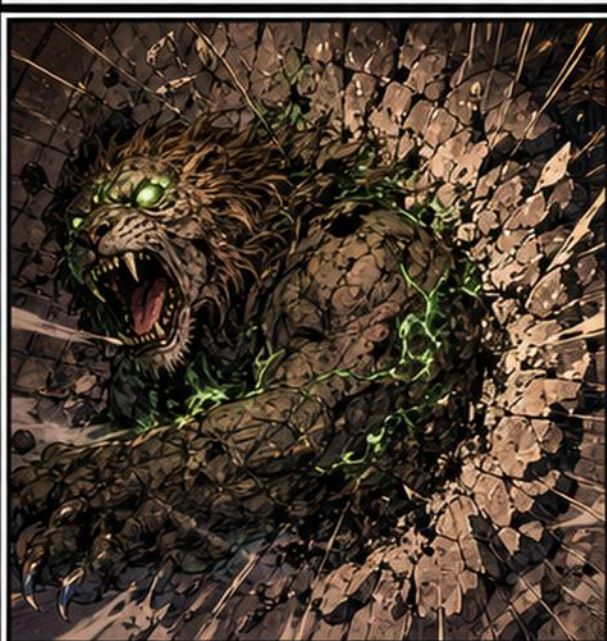

Sword light cleared
the curse.

Kicks sent the
dead pride flying.

The remaining undead
lions scattered.

At last,
the gallery
was quiet.

I never learned
who owned
the castle.

Or who taught
the trophies
to attack.

But I
defended
myself.

And I had
a fun time.

