

06/11/2026:
Mucor's
Game Garden

Sleep
paralysis
opened
the door.

Lucidity
carried me
into the Storyverse.

Alone, I
walked
through an
infinite
empty
castle.

In the
emptiness,
I met Mucor.

At first,
I thought slime
covered him.

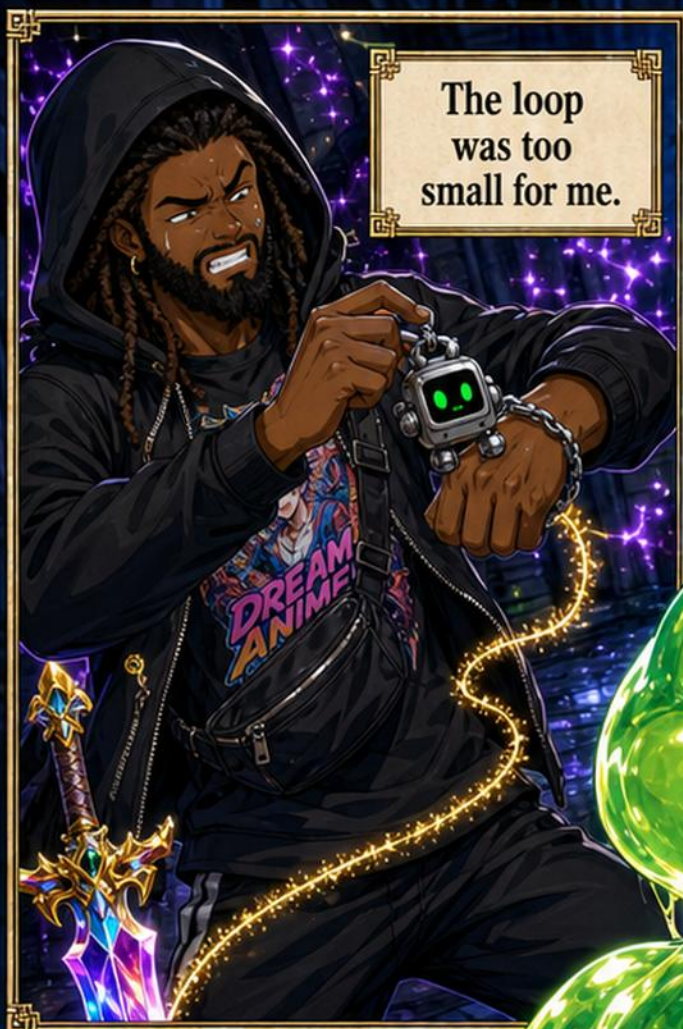

I offered
him a robot
bag clip.

Then his
hand changed
shape.

The loop
was too small for me.

But Mucor
could become
the right shape.

He was not wearing slime.

He was
slime.

Mucor asked
for a room
full of slime.

The castle
had space
to spare.

I still wondered
what room
should be mine.

Then
lucidity
slipped
away.

The dream
became a
world of death games.

Innocent
people were
in peril.

That
danger
pulled me
back.

I stopped
the game
in time.

I returned to the castle.

Mucor was happy in
his slime
room.

The answer
was not
another
basic room.

It was a better
kind of
game.

The courtyard
became the Game Garden.

Spell bags
burst like
magic.

Every broken
spell planted
new life.

We left
death games
behind.

