

06/07/2026:
Turtle Towers

I induced lucidity through
sleep paralysis.

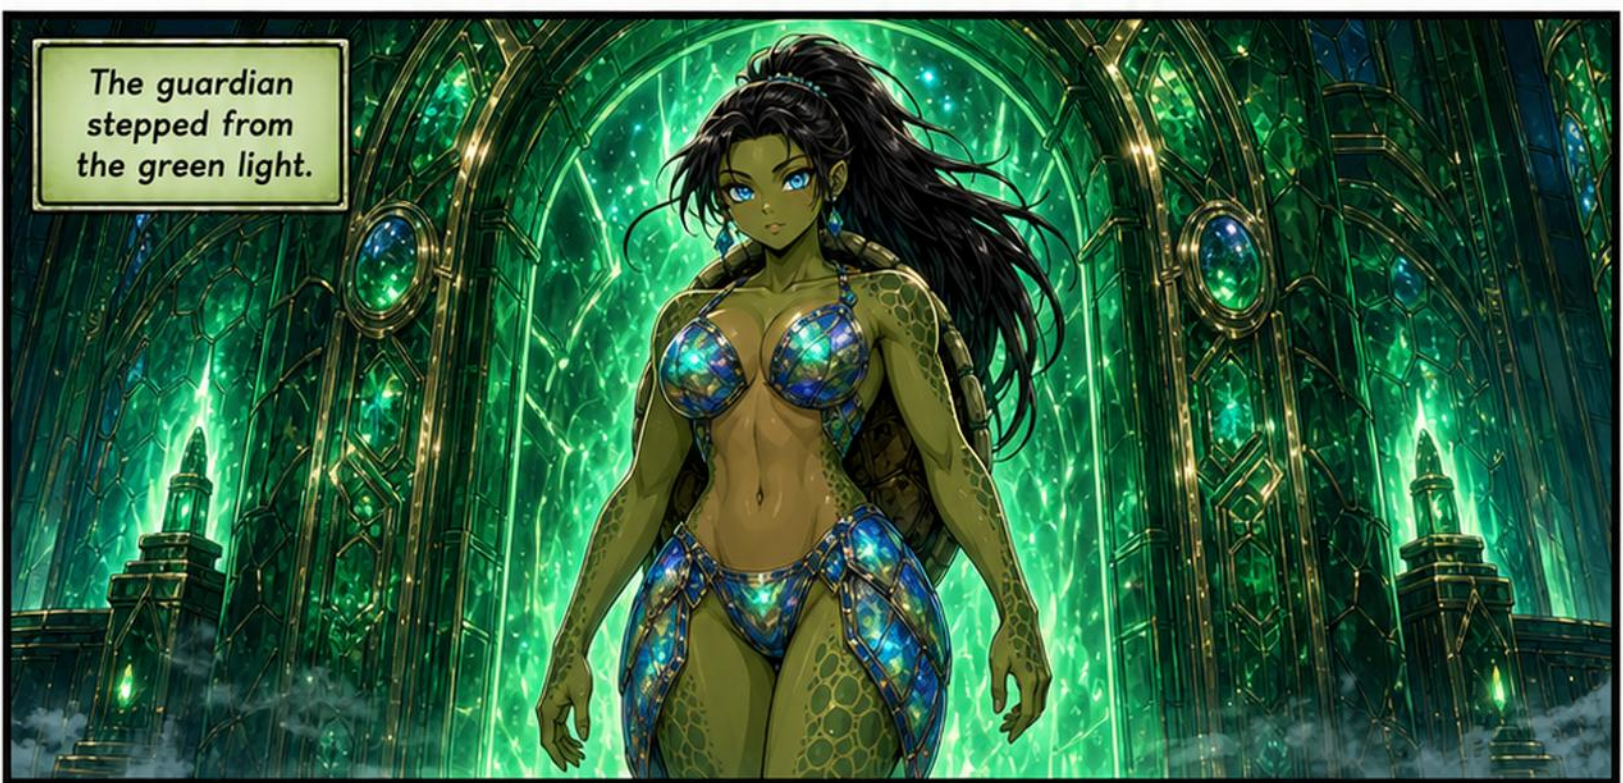

I arrived alone
in the shadow of Turtle Towers.

The emerald
spirals rose too
high to measure.

Something ancient
was sealed inside.

The guardian
stepped from
the green light.

Her name
was Turtalia.

A mint-green
bond sparked
between us.

She guarded
power she no
longer trusted.

She had once
been the World Turtle.

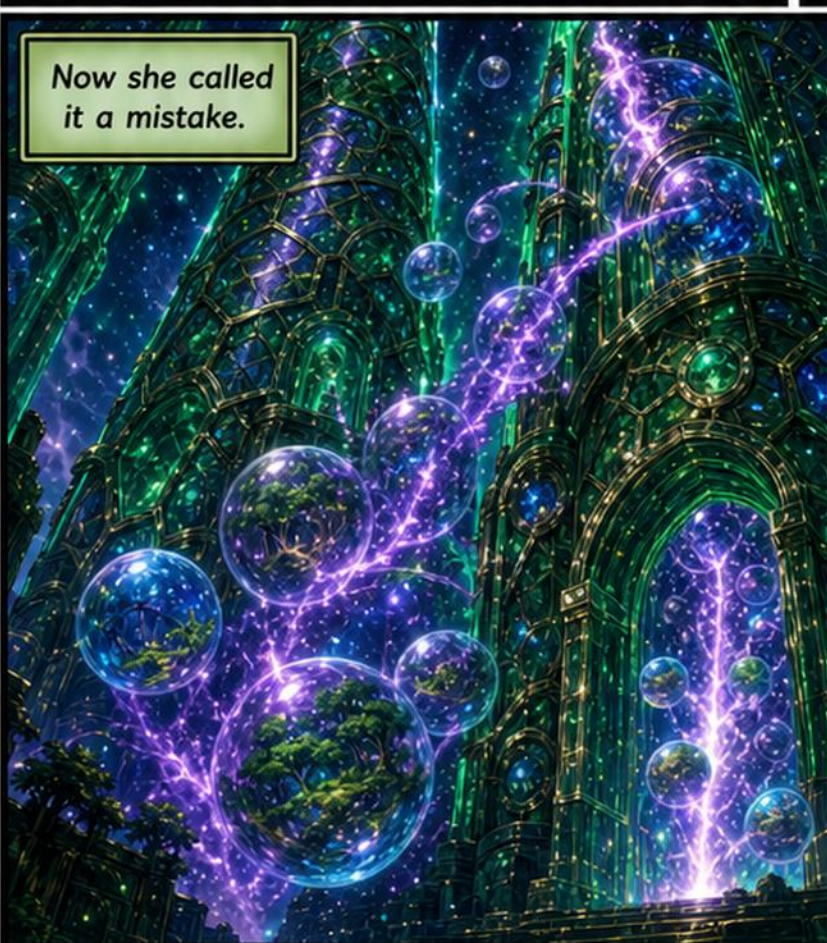

She carried
worlds across
the cosmos.

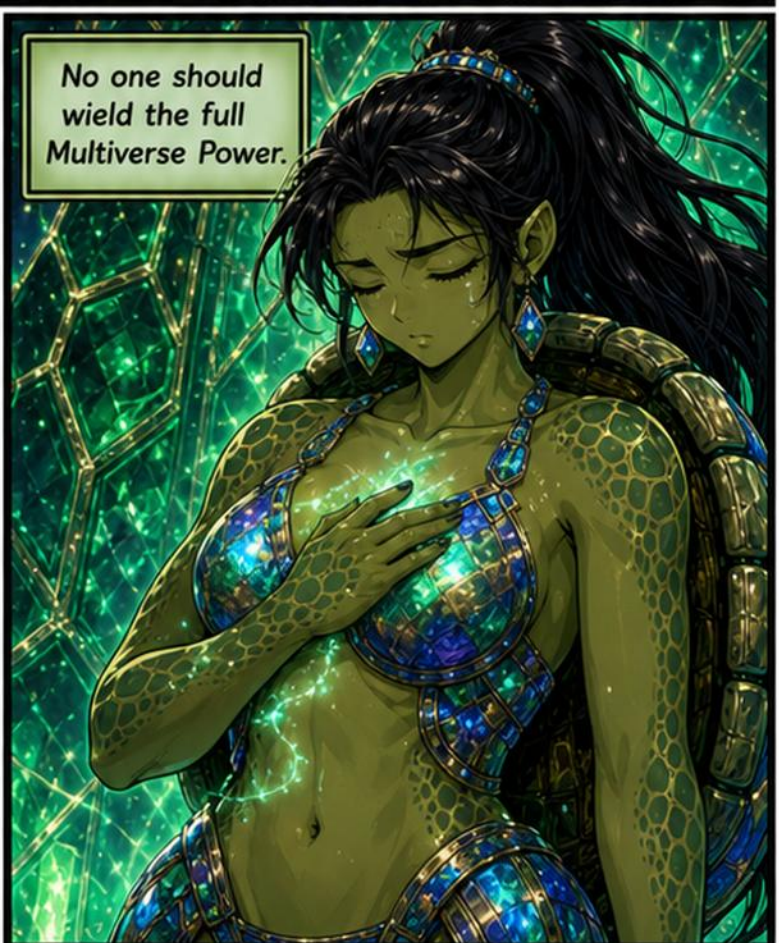

She had puppeted
people with
that burden.

Now she called
it a mistake.

No one should
wield the full
Multiverse Power.

Together we rode the northern sky.

The serpent
carried us through
living auroras.

The bond showed
me where danger
gathered.

Below us, the Exterminators
moved.

Their acid
was made
to erase.

I entered their ranks in yellow armor.

The visor
hid my face.

The acid sprayer
was heavy in
my hands.

When they turned
on the towers,
I turned it back.

Their own
weapon broke
their line.

The disguise
failed in the locker rooms.

Yellow suits
closed every exit.

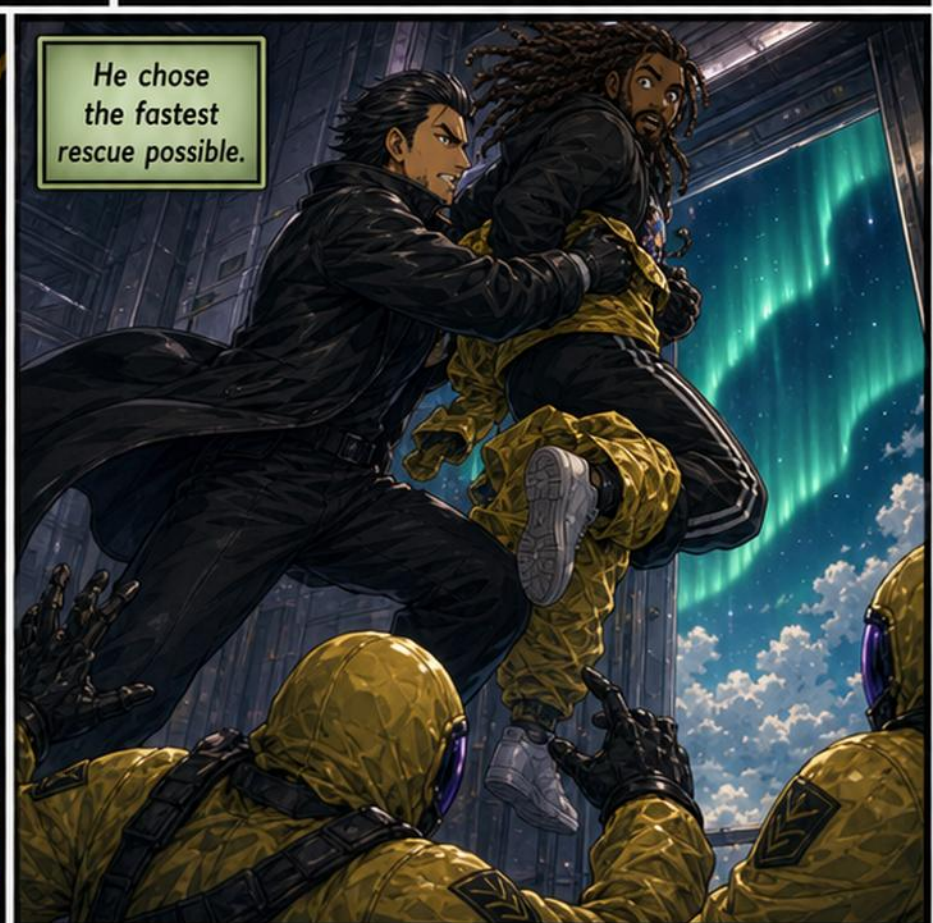

I had the sprayer,
but not the space.

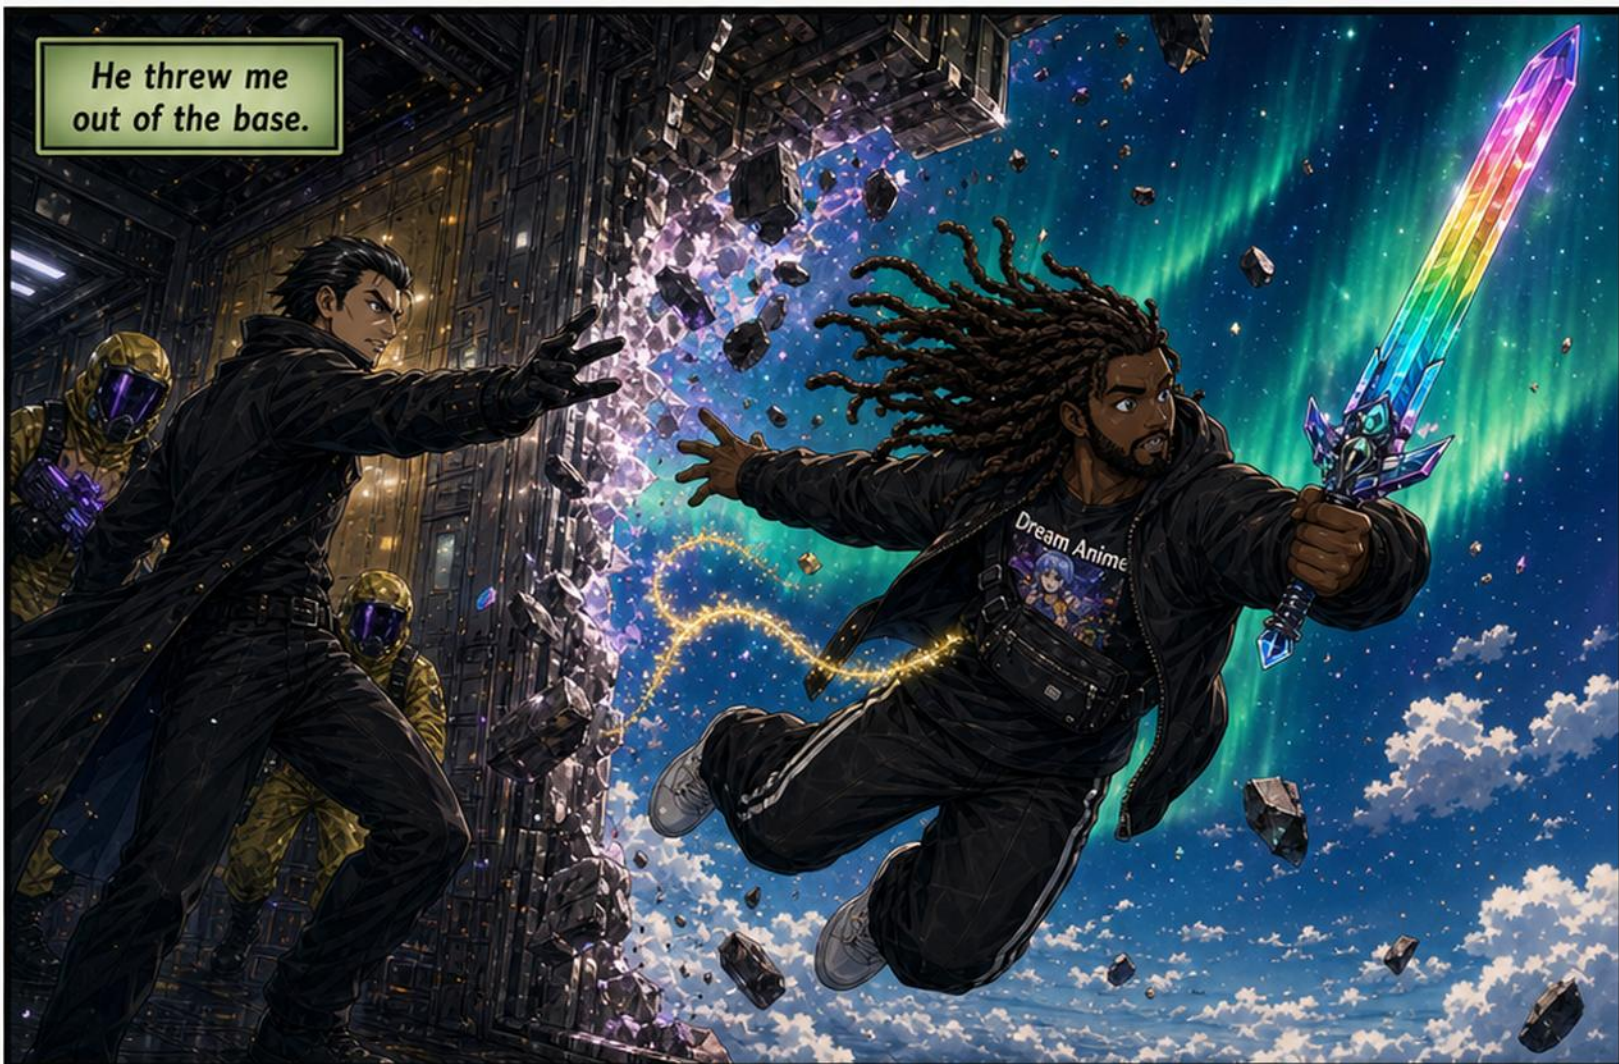

Then Turtalia's
ally arrived.

He chose
the fastest
rescue possible.

He threw me
out of the base.

The sky caught me
before the enemy could.

Turtalia and
the serpent
were waiting.

The Turtle Towers
stayed sealed.

Some powers are protected by refusing them.